start to a series Von Kindle Junkie Mortician and coroner Jaye and her best friend SHERIFF (not detective) Jack Lawson team up to solve the murders in their tiny Virginia town. When Jaye hooks up with crime writer Brodie, Jack's suspicious and jealous reaction is stereotypical and the reader suspects Jack's feelings towards Jaye may not be only platonic. The amount of case information she shares with Brodie seems to be too much for someone not on the investigative team. But overall, this is a well-written/told story. 0 von 0 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. Perfect Kindle book Von Customer First book I remember and enjoyed so much on Kindle. Von Tomke Shn For me, this is a book good enough to have finished reading it, but the story didn't pull me in. I don't think the author researched very well how a coroner or a small town detective would work, after all, why would a writer be involved just like that, no questions asked? At the end, the identity of a mystery killer is pulled out of the hat. No real detective work done, but I think it's supposed to be more about the relationship between Jaye and Jack anyway...

She molded America's youth, busted kids for smoking pot in the restrooms, and broke up illicit affairs behind the stage on a regular basis. (Liliana's Addison Holmes Mystery Series, about a small town teacher who gets into a whole lot of trouble, is somewhat autobiographical, but she won't confess to which parts). Liliana began reading romance novels with all her new found free time, and when she ran out of things to read, she decided to write her own novels. The result was a 150,000 word thriller--a dazzling adventure--where the heroine was a thirty-year-old virgin assassin (Yes, you read that right). She couldn't imagine why people weren't knocking down her door to read it, but she persevered and began writing a second book. She finally got the hang of things, and eventually learned that losing one's virginity wasn't all that romantic after all. All of her books involve some kind of suspense (she just can't help herself), laughter, and a lot of steamy sex. Since the failure of her first attempt, Liliana's books have won awards such as: The Daphne Du Maurier, The Suzannah, The Linda Howard Award of Excellence, The Maggie, and many other awards. Her affiliations include Romance Writers of America, Mystery Writers of America, and Sisters in Crime. Liliana loves to cook, and is addicted to reading, Internet Boggle, kickboxing, and Bones. She lives in a big, rambling house in Texas with a couple of cats to keep her company. She loves to get emails from readers. Enjoy the Adventures!
