"IN A CLASS BY ITSELF"Von Al-Khemet Book ClubThe compelling portrayal of a woman who loved and lost and finds love again. I felt what Joanna Woods felt and therefore was able to identify with her character. Luke was a curr, bad for her and life has it was of moving out those people who no longer serve towards our purpose and though at times very heartbreaking as in Luke's case, it was for the best.Desperate to find piece of mind Joanna takes a vacation in Paris and meets Nathan Jones, a businessman with more power than most as he is secretly a CIA agent, a beautiful twist I enjoyed. Kizzie Darker is an ingenious new author and this novel was a masterpiece of strategy. Nathan may have come to Joanna with excess baggage but thats love, his tethers might be removed, he might get married to Joanna one day, you never can tell, its already written in the stars, but one thing is certain, these two have that spark, they have that blaze to set the world around them on fire and not even notice as they are locked in feverish embrace and such chemistry isnt easy to find as its pure, real and true.Mr CIA later has some tanglings with the Mafia and Joanna finds herself tangled in the mix, and the novel takes on a new feeling of hopelessness and a new pain. Distraction Desire begins to sing the compelling tune of a resourceful woman in the heart of enemies she would have never thought of tangling with in her lifetime, all because she fell in love.This book had chills and thrills, it crosses boundaries and genres creating its own, so many themes, twist and turns and Kizzie's mastery of the human emotions hammers feelings home into readers hearts. This intense and vivid tale is in a class by itself.Al- Khemet Book Club, Mar 2015
