Drenched in Dominance and set aflame Von Jean Smith Jessica was floating through life with what some women might think was a perfect situation a boyfriend that cooked and cleaned. But what if you wanted to do for your man? What if you wanted to do the cooking and cleaning, to provide all those things that say you care for your man? Then there was the whole sexual aspect of things. What if that same man had a way of working you up then leaving you hanging every damned time. Oh, Joeys kink of inviting a few friends in from time to time might have been exciting in the beginning but it becomes old real quick. And then...Then here came Dillon, storming into my life like he was a god. He was everything drenched in testosterone and dominance and he set my blood on fire. Dillon the next door neighbor is everything hot and dominant with his former army commander bearing, whispered words of command, knowing hands and all that tight and ripped body pushing up against her at every turn. This man is everything that turns her on and scares her at the same time Is it him scaring her, though or her own wants and needs? One push too far by the boyfriend sends Jess running right into the arms of Dillon where shes about to find out just how right being with this man can be. The chemistry and heat between these two is sizzling. Where sex has quickly become blase with Joey, Dillon stirs her fires instantly and sets her senses aflame. Just when youre thinking things have definitely gotten interesting this episode is over and we get a view of Joeys very vindictive and selfish thoughts. J. Richards definitely has a way with building the tension and she certainly delivers. That final scene with Joey leaves you wanting to know just where things will go. *****Reviewed by Xtreme-Delusions*****
