StoryVon katrin3112Ein gutes Buch von Emily Griffin, die Personen haben alle ihren eigenen Charakter und man kann der Geschichte gut folgen.1 von 1 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. Sizzling romance - couldn't put it down!Von Ein KundeKitty Wilder, Head of the one person PR department of the western tourist attraction old town of Hot Water, CA, is a truly likeable heroine (valkyrie cum farmer's daughter, to quote the author) and she manages to force her hero husband, who didn't know he was married to her until he returned to his home town eight years after the wedding, to play the sheriff's part in their old-west reenacting. She plays the part of her ancestors, the infamous Wilder women, who owned the brothel in Hot Water. An interesting situation right there ;-) Vivacious dialogues and some laugh-out-loud come-backs spice up this thoroughly enjoyable romance.If the plot itself is a tad unbelievable, the good story-telling makes up for it.

KurzbeschreibungA 94,000-word full-length novel.There's a saying around the town of Hot Water, California: "Wilder women don't wed." When the town was founded, the Wilders ran the local house of ill repute...nowadays they're still known for their naughty ways.But Kitty Wilder has decided that it's time for all that to change!Kitty Wilder longed for a little respectability, so eight years ago she finagled an "I do" out of local hero Dylan Matthews. The ceremony was only supposed to be a tourist attraction sham, but a loophole made it legal ... a little fact she'd "conveniently" neglected to share until Dylan came storming back into her life.How could he be married and not even know it? As an FBI agent, Dylan thought he'd seen it all, but this was outrageous. Kitty is still gorgeous, appealing, and even she deserves more than the toughened man he had become. But before Dylan can accept the powerful emotions he has for this unexpected wife he has to first face down the demons of his past...KurzbeschreibungA 94,000-word full-length novel.There's a saying around the town of Hot Water, California: "Wilder women don't wed."
