Intelligence, HeartVon CustomerThis little story has a big heart and volumes of personality. The writing is so vivid and subtle that youre bound to be drawn in no matter what your reading preferences are. The author has skilfully offset the emotional turmoil against the balanced background of the everyday university campus life. You will be equally engrossed in the protagonists passionate romance and in his interactions with his friends. It seems these 8000 words have it all, and you simply cant find a better short read.

KurzbeschreibungCastor Evans leaves his native town and travels to London to commence undergraduate studies at Greenwich University. Upon arrival, he meets his first love, Mike, and a girl called Violet, who becomes Castors closest friend.Castor is still a child in many ways, yet intelligent beyond his nineteen years. How will he cope with the first heartbreak?First Wound is one of the most exciting LGBT short reads (8000 words), and the first installment of the London Gay Dates series about Castors adventures in the vibrant British capital.KurzbeschreibungCastor Evans leaves his native town and travels to London to commence undergraduate studies at Greenwich University.
