Good readVon TMConner and Kendal were best friends in school and as they got older, they became more. While Conner was always comfortable with who he was, Kendal never came to terms with the fact that he liked men, or more specifically, his best friend. When he got a girl pregnant and married her straight out of high school, Conner left, unable to watch. Ten years later they bump into each other at the grocery store. Conner just moved back to town to help his mom after a stroke. Kendal is a widower with a 10 year old son. This could be a second chance, a chance that Conner has been waiting for all his life and Kendal just now realizes that he has been waiting for it, too. But his fear of coming out hasn't changed and he is not sure he can do it this time around. Two very engrossing characters and a sweet love story. There is some angst due to the fact that Kendal can't admit the truth about himself even to himself, but at the same time, like another reviewer said, Conner and Kendal are too right for each other to not have their HEA. Enjoyed reading this one.

Kurzbeschreibung Kendal and Conner thought they would be best friends forever. There was nothing that would ever come between them. Until something did. Refusing to watch the man he loves marry someone else, Conner leaves town to focus on his own life and career, but he's never forgotten the one person who has always meant the most to him. Ten years later, Conner is back to care for his mother, bringing him face to face with Kendal and emotions that never died. Kendal has spent his life focused on his job, but now, as a single father, there are new fears and worries that risk pulling the two friends apart once again.
